Your continued patience with air-conditioning repairs is greatly appreciated. Please help DPW by accurately describing your air-conditioning failure and level of urgency so that DPW may devote its precious resources to the most critical cooling outages. Intentionally elevating the criticality of a cooling outage results in diversion of precious resources away from the true emergencies and overall delays for all work orders. DPW air-conditioning technicians have been instructed to leave the work site if the work priority of a failed cooling unit is misrepresented. If you have a Demand Maintenance Order (DMO) number, then DPW is aware of your situation and will work relentlessly within our operational constraints to get your system repaired based on priorities. The DPW work order desk will provide statuses upon request after 10 days since the order was submitted. Thanks for your continued patience and cooperation.
